an executable file (i.e. the program you want to run). exe files are generally self-extracting, meaning they are designed to run and run when executed. the size of an exe file is the size of the.exe file (the main executable program) and the rest is the. (the data section). it generally includes the program information, such as the program
