Wilcom Embroidery Studio E2.0 Full Cracked ApklThe present invention relates to a method of fabricating a semiconductor device, and, more particularly, to a method of fabricating a semiconductor device which has a semiconductor substrate formed with an isolation structure. In a semiconductor device, a pre-process for forming an isolation structure is conducted in order to prevent a leakage current from occurring between adjacent circuit elements. A conventional fabrication process for forming an isolation structure will be described below. First, a sacrificial oxide is formed to a thickness of 100 nm on a silicon substrate by a thermal oxidation method. Subsequently, a silicon nitride film which is an etching stop film for forming an isolation trench is formed by a CVD method, with a thickness of about 2000 nm. Then, with the silicon nitride film serving as a mask, a trench is formed at a depth of about 1000 nm by a RIE (Reactive Ion Etching) process. A photo resist is then applied on a region other than a trench and is exposed and developed in a self-alignment manner using the silicon nitride film as a mask. The silicon nitride film and the sacrificial oxide are selectively etched by a plasma etching method. Then, the resist is removed, and the silicon nitride film is removed by an etching method which uses plasma. Thus, the isolation trench is formed. However, in this conventional method, when an impurity ion is implanted to the silicon substrate and a source/drain region is formed by a thermal process, a process condition for forming the source/drain region must be changed according to the position of the isolation trench. Also, since the
