Your serial number is printed on your invoice. When you register your order, you will also have a serial ID printed on your invoice. If the code is not identified on our invoice, then the parcel will go to our employee, who will try to find a parcel for you in the warehouse with our serial number (confirmed by my signature on your parcel). If he refuses and does not try to do this, then you will lose the parcel, since our employee, having received the parcel number, will open it in our warehouse, look at its contents, and if there is the thing that you ordered, then he will give it to you. You can return it if you want. If our employee tries to send it to you, then when it arrives at the warehouse, he will not be able to do this and will suggest that you just put up with this situation. We also have items in stock that were normally delivered to customers but are currently unavailable, so keep that in mind. Example: We cooperate with a large retail chain that often orders home appliances. Recently, as examples, he constantly orders electronics, so we created our section on the site and started sending such goods there. Usually, customers who place an order indicate the delivery address and we must send this address to him. And then one day we receive an order, it says: "Pushkin, 12, building 1, apt. 4." We sent the order to this address and received nothing for several days. We wrote to the address on the order and received the following response: "Your package has arrived at the office of operator 1. There are 25,000 items in stock and will not be reshipped." We don't know why they do this to us, but we don't receive these messages on the site anymore. Fortunately, there is another employee in the same department, and he quickly told us that we were deliberately misled, trying to impose a product that we did not order and that the package needed to be returned to the warehouse. We're sure the employee chose this address because they think it's ours. As you already know, we do not send emails to customers who have previously ordered goods from us. Please do not use our shipping numbers. 5. Support service We respect our clients and those people who cooperate with us. Yes, sometimes we have problems and we cannot work with online stores that do not want to return money to customers or do not respond to letters. But after all, most of us receive packages from
