Record macros in your browser, add notes, add words in videos, run a macro from a URL, call a macro, enter a URL to a macro and play it back, run macros at startup The extensions all work the same way, so you can use them if you are a lover of macros. You can record your own macro to save your keystrokes, or you can choose a pre-recorded macro from the Extensions section. You can then edit the text of the macro by entering the editable text in the Widget. A couple of the extensions, such as Word Cloud, Inception, Off-Screen Video, Google Noto, Bookmark to Screen and Audio Bookmarker, have more advanced features than the others, but the basic functionality is the same for all. Each of the extensions allows you to record a macro in a browser window. When you are done, you can play it back with the corresponding function. AutoScroll Plus is an extension that allows you to see in the side bar of your browser the Web pages that are currently being viewed. This is useful if you don't want to waste time constantly clicking the browser's back button. If you're like me, this extension can be pretty handy. Another useful feature is that you can add notes, words and keywords to the web pages you are currently viewing in the extension's interface. This makes it easy to save a page for later use or share it with a friend. The extension also lets you send messages to a bookmark in a page, so you can easily share a webpage with a friend. There are extensions for all browsers, but if you want to use this version of AutoScroll Plus in Chrome, you will have to do some work first. If you are already a Chrome user, you can install this extension through the Chrome Web Store. Go to the official site: Why are you still using Firefox? You know you should be using Google Chrome. You have better browsing experience in Google Chrome. You have already heard that and this is the last time we're bringing this up. The Google Chrome is the number one browser that gets over 2.5 Billion downloads every month and for good reason. You might think, wow that's a lot. Well that's because there are hundreds of things wrong with Firefox. Why Use Google Chrome? It's really simple. Google's Chrome has evolved to be better. Firefox's days are numbered. Chrome has been around for a lot longer than Firefox. It comes with updates faster, is more secure and has some features that are hard to come by for Firefox. It's the truth. Google chrome is now the best browser to use. There are so many cool features, it's insane. Do you use Firefox? If not, you should. For so many reasons. Firefox has so many cool features, and is much better than Chrome. There's a good reason that Chrome is so popular, and that is because it is better. Firefox is not. We all know that. Firefox was supposed to be better than Chrome, but it's not. So Chrome is better. There's so many features of Google Chrome that are amazing. Here are some reasons to switch. Firefox is not for everyone. I was a Firefox

A useful and informative extension for your browser As soon as you install it, you realize that Weatherly is not only well-designed, but also offers a lot of information. When you open the extension's interface, you receive not only the current temperature and atmospheric conditions in your location, but also information about humidity, pressure and visibility. You can also see the highs and lows of the day, a 7-day forecast and the exact sunrise and sunset times. The add-on automatically detects your location, but you can easily search for the weather in other places (such as your next travel destination), or you can set Weatherly to display another preferred location. You can also switch between the Celsius and Fahrenheit temperature scales. Stay knowledgeable about the weather While Weatherly is certainly not one-of-a-kind, it's still an informative and unobtrusive extension. Even when you don't open its drop-down window, the icon in the Chrome bar will display the current temperature. The only tiny issue I have is that there's a very short (but still perceptible) loading time whenever you want to access the main interface. It's understandable, since there's a lot of information to display, but one would expect a weather tool to be lightning fast (pun intended). Other than that, Weatherly can be considered a worthy addition to your browser. I'm talking about finding the right person for you. You might think that you've found the right person once, but when your spouse starts to demand more than you're willing to give, and that you've failed to see that it was coming, then you need to search for help. If you are getting divorced because of your ex-spouse, then it would be a good idea to find the help of a relationship counselor. It's important that you find a counselor who will help you get the most out of your marriage. No matter what the cause of the breakup, a counselor can help you find a new relationship that will be based on a solid foundation. Whether you're still in the honeymoon period of your relationship, you are already divorced, or you are already on your third wife, the right counselor can help
