Silver is available in a number of different chemical forms, but for the purposes of this citation sheet, the authors are specifically interested in the form commonly known as "white gold." White gold is a colloidal form of silver which derives from a reduction of silver nitrate and potassium carbonate, using a hydrochloric acid solution. The special properties of white gold are that, while its color is determined by the organic layers which form part of the silver colloid, it is not appreciably affected by age. [Comparative study of the immunocorrective effect of mebendazole and albendazole in type I and type II allergic reactions to albendazole]. The study was conducted on 30 rabbits by means of the experimental model of allergic reaction to Albendazole, with determination of the level of IgE, IgG, IgM in sera and the immediate and delayed hypersensitivity reaction (HIS-HR) in the ear. The immunocorrective effect of mebendazole and albendazole was estimated in the animals during prolonged treatment at the dose of 10 mg/kg. Mebendazole was found to be more effective in the treatment of both types of allergic reaction to Albendazole.Children with conduct problems are significantly more sensitive to stress-induced increases in cortisol and interleukin-6 than children with no behavioral problems, according to new research from the University of Cambridge. 1cb139a0ed
