AnalystSight is a very simple and handy application designed to help computer users use a series of predefined icons and texts to visualize the effect of certain actions on a system. Many users use shortcuts to access certain files and folders, but it is possible to reduce the time it takes to open those folders by creating a flashcard of the icons and text instead. To setup AnalystSight, you must first place the flashing icons and texts in a new folder that you wish to add to the Basic icon set that comes with the utility. When a new icon set is selected, the utility allows you to customize its appearance, change its order, and change the size of each icon. This way, you can perform different actions for each set of icons. Analysis options

- ☑ Use of the Basic set of icons and texts
- ☑ Create your own set of icons and texts
- ☑ Change the location of the folder where icons and texts are kept
- ☑ Use of only the whole icon or only the text
- ☑ Use of both the whole icon and the text
- ☑ Selection of icons and texts
- ☑ Change the type of text, i.e. bold, italic, underlined
- ☑ Customization of sizes of the icons and texts
- ☑ Options for the frame of the icons and texts
- ☑ Selection of the layout, i.e. default, 4 x 3, 9 x 7, and 5 x 4
- ☑ 3-4 lines are attached to each icon or text

☑ Stop the analysis and launch the file that was selected

- ☑ Shrink and expand the icons and texts
- ☑ Another application can select the set of icons and texts in order to monitor the action you performed on the computer Software's interface

The custom-designed interface is simple and intuitive

TrayCD Free (2022)

TrayCD is a utility that features a tray icon that enables you to hide and show the main window of your applications. As soon as you run TrayCD you can enable the main window, reduce its size, re-size it to occupy half of the window space, move it to a specified location, create it automatically when you log on, disable the tray icon, and show notifications in the system tray. The software includes some handy features such as the ability to install a tray icon to appear in the system tray, support for system-wide hotkeys, and the option of creating an icon for each of the applications you install. The program can also be scheduled to launch applications on login. TrayCD allows you to manage and control your applications in the task bar using icons that are compatible with the native Windows 7-8 interface. Besides, it presents a large range of customizable tasks that you may include in the main window. In order to do so, you can either define short or long hotkeys, drag-and-drop icons between the tiles, and place icons anywhere on the desktop. What's more, the user interface (UI) is just as customizable as the functionality thanks to the plethora of options provided by the application. In particular, it has a left-click menu, which you can use to perform simple actions such as managing windows, adjusting the tray icon settings, configuring hotkeys, viewing open windows, restarting applications, or triggering an application. Other features Besides the main tray icon and the ability to show open applications on the desktop, another handy feature is the support for a system-wide hotkey. To utilize it you will have to run the program, then add the desired application to the list of hotkeys. You can add commands that will run a specific application, launch a specific window, and, more importantly, enable the application in the taskbar. Moreover, you can also include a hotkey to show or hide the main window, which you can use for quickly accessing a program without making the rest of the windows visible on the desktop. Finally, TrayCD lets you create a group of shortcuts on the desktop. By including some of them in the group, a single hotkey will activate the group. As soon as you install it you will notice a system tray icon that looks just like the ones offered by the native Windows 7-8 UI. TrayCD has a clean and simple interface that hides some of its advanced features. 09e8f5149f
