In your setup, I noticed a shortcut to Google Chrome in Windows Explorer, can you kindly confirm if it is indeed the case or if it was just me seeing this one. Another thing I noticed was that I could select Network Location and select my computer from this list, but I didn't see the same list in the Network Locations dialogue window that pops up when I choose "Add New Network Location", is that normal? I don't think I have the SP1 yet. I will install it and let you know what the result is. I will send you a copy of the build and you can try it yourself. I was thinking of doing the same thing but I haven't got a computer to test it on.I Saw It on the CES, Took a Snapshot of the PC Made by It.

What's New in the ReConnect?

ReConnect is a small Windows software solution that lends a hand to all those browsing the web with an unstable connection, offering simple tools to automatically reconnect in case of disconnection. Simple looks It may sound like a basic application and more or less it is one, but the configuration options it sports make it a must have utility for all dial-up users. The main window for example only shows a simple log screen with three dedicated buttons at the bottom, to connect or disconnect and to access the settings screen. Configuration settings The configuration options we were talking about allow you to pick the connection you wish to control, choose the dial mode, which can be either async or sync, input the username and password and enable logging. Additionally, you are prompted to enable auto reconnect and define the interval to retry connection and the number of retry attempts. Built-in timer Another good thing about the application is the fact that it comes with a built-in timer that enables you to disconnect at any user-defined time or even shutdown the computer automatically. Performance Also featuring a dedicated option to start the app with Windows, ReConnect runs on low computer resources and works flawlessly on all Windows versions. It doesn't need administrator privileges to run on Windows 7. Bottom line Overall, ReConnect does its job very well and even if it may seem a very simple tool at the first glance, it sports a great amount of configuration options. It places an icon in the Windows System Tray and doesn't even bother you when trying to reconnect to the Internet.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a thin film transistor substrate, and more particularly, to a thin film transistor substrate having improved characteristics and a method of fabricating the same. 2. Description of the Related Art Recently, as the information society progresses, demands for information communication media are increasing rapidly. Accordingly, research on flat panel display devices such as liquid crystal display (LCD) devices and plasma display panels (PDPs) has been actively conducted. In particular, in the flat panel display device, a thin film transistor (TFT) array substrate is used. An LCD device includes a thin film transistor substrate including a plurality of pixel areas, each of which is provided with a TFT, a pixel electrode and a capacitor, an opposite substrate including a common electrode, and liquid crystal interposed between the TFT substrate and the opposite substrate. As the liquid crystal display device is a non-emissive device that cannot emit light by itself, the liquid crystal display device uses a backlight as a light source. In a liquid crystal display device having an LCD panel as described above, a backlight includes an LED light source for emitting light, which is arranged at the rear side of the liquid crystal display panel. A backlight may
