KeyMacro Versions: Video: Trouble at the Beach We've got some big news about the Alice in Wonderland CD release show this Saturday night. First, we've had some really awesome trouble with the venue's internet connection. They've tried to remedy the issue, and it's fixed, but now the line is super long, and we can't really tell how long it's gonna be. We know it's gonna be at least three hours, possibly four. We also know that our favorite band, The Expendables, will be playing. They're a real good fit for this gig, since the show is a little out of the ordinary. But they're also a really nice band, and we don't wanna miss out on their set. We'll have plenty of news and photos when we're on the way to the show. Palm Beach, Fla. -- As a referee, David J. Baker was known for helping players and teams put their best foot forward in the Florida sun. But, for about 18 months in 2004, he was known more for a different kind of infraction. Baker was charged with four counts of lewd and lascivious behavior and one count of petit theft after an arrest in Palm Beach in April 2004. Police were called to the home of former professional football player Brian Simmons, where they found Baker and Simmons naked in a locked bedroom. According to the arrest report, the two had sex. Simmons agreed to serve a year of probation and do community service, and Baker agreed to perform 300 hours of community service. Baker, a referee for the South Florida Suncoast in 1d6a3396d6
