Free GIF Text Maker Product Key DownloadAs he stops for a moment to pick up some of the many newspaper clippings that come his way, New York Governor Andrew Cuomo raps a little rap on the side. "I'm A SADMAN', he says, then goes on to break some hearts: "i think It's goin on, We can blame each other, but it's all about me!" Sorry, Governor. It's not you. The SAD Man is sad to realize that he's the reason that millions of New Yorkers are going to be without Social Security benefits on January 1, 2013. While it is true that on January 1, 2013, New York State will join the recession that began in 2007, the State's legislature is not to blame for starting our spiraling economic decline. In a less than three year span since the last recession, the New York State Assembly has enacted hundreds of measures to make life more expensive for New Yorkers. These days, you can't buy a new car, you can't get a new apartment and you can't buy a home without paying a ream of new taxes and fees. The sad part is that these new taxes and fees are not imposed on other states. They are New York State's way of redistributing New York's cash to other states, states that don't share New York's long-standing tax breaks with other states. Take away New York's Community Renewal Tax Relief, its mortgage interest deduction for over $100,000 of home improvement and its earned income tax credit, and you've taken away over $40 billion in new tax breaks to other states. 09e8f5149f
