ScreenCamera For PC [Updated]

Create your own macros for Windows that can be triggered by keyboard shortcuts! Keymacro is a revolutionary tool that enables users to define their own keyboard shortcuts. You simply use Keymacro to record a macro (in other words, a sequence of keyboard strokes that are assigned to any command you want), and then you assign the macro to any hotkey combination. The point is, you can assign keyboard shortcuts for performing actions that are common, like for instance, launching an internet search, opening a certain application, saving a file, etc. You also have the possibility to assign shortcuts that are more complex and that require a sequence of keystrokes, like performing a search in a website, copying a long list of numbers to the clipboard, and so on. Once the macro is assigned to a hotkey, it becomes active immediately after you press the hotkey, and you can repeat the hotkey sequence as many times as needed. Keymacro saves your macros in a special file, and it can be enabled or disabled. Furthermore, you can assign a name to a macro, you can add notes, and you can see the definition of a macro in the text view if you need to review it. The macro you define can be saved and loaded to and from a file. On top of that, Keymacro offers a very simple and intuitive interface that enables you to create macros with a minimum of effort. The application is free, and a pro version is available for a one-time fee. KEYCAPTURE Description: Capture screenshots and webcam images. Capture image and webcam snapshots with KEYCAPTURE. With this application, users can capture any part of the desktop and record it on Windows Media format. What's New In?

ScreenCamera is a video recording tool able to capture the current activity of your screen and save it to a file, as well as take screenshots. It comes in handy for all users who want to record online conversations, and video streams from YouTube or others websites. It sports a clean and intuitive GUI that gives you the possibility to record or take snapshots of the entire screen or only the selected area. What's more, you make the program capture the region around the mouse cursor, or only individual windows. Furthermore, ScreenCamera enables users to play, pause, or stop the current recording session, preview the region that is captured in a dedicated pane, as well as broadcast your screen and webcam on MSN, Skype, ICQ, or other programs. The screenshots can be saved to BMP or JPG, while the recordings can be exported to WMV or AVI, and you can configure the video parameters in terms of codecs and compression level. Plus, you can select the webcam, specify the video format, assign keyboard shortcuts for taking snapshots and recording, pick the saving directory, specify the frame rate, run the program at Windows startup, and open the folders where the images and videos are stored directly from the primary panel. Additionally, you can make ScreenCamera show the mouse pointer during the recording session, remain on top of other utilities, and automatically minimize to the system tray when taking snapshots and recording. During our testing we have noticed that ScreenCamera offers good image and video quality without errors throughout the entire process.
