This article was published at docking study of protoporphyrin-like compounds as potential photosensitizers: Influence of metal ions. Molecular docking studies on a protoporphyrin-like compound (PPC) linked to zinc ions (ZnPP-C4H6) have been carried out. The experiments have been performed on the photosensitizer protein and some of its mutants. The results show that the ZnPP-C4H6 interacts with the residues of the cofactor-binding domain, which leads to the optimization of the cofactor binding. The results support the recent findings on the roles of the metal ions in the protein stabilization. #ifndef _NCR_700_H_ #define _NCR_700_H_ /* * The Linux NCR host driver for the 700 series chip families. * * For questions about driver licensing, please contact Brian Jordan . * For further information, contact NCR about our new driver distribution * program: * * * * * Send bug reports and patches to . * * See and *

Worshippers in Taipei may have their own idea of heaven, but we're rather partial to the way in which Microsoft embraces its Windows brand. The software giant made available a fresh batch of software this week, including some of its most recent Windows 10 OS releases. Three aspects of interest, for now, include Windows 10 Anniversary Update, the latest version of Windows 10 Mobile, and Windows 10 Pro. Anniversary Update Welcoming its latest version of the OS, Microsoft provided it to existing users on July 29, and provided it to users of eligible new devices on August 2. Microsoft also outlined that all existing Windows 10 users were to receive the Anniversary Update through an automatic update on September 16. Still, the software maker said the automatic update didn't go through for some users. Those who received the update of course need to re-install it, in order to use all of the features offered by the new software version. Anniversary Update, as we expected, brings quite a number of major changes to Windows 10. These include a redesigned Lock screen, new emoji, revamped Start menu, a new Experience Settings menu, new Settings features, including a new privacy section, and several new features for Microsoft Edge. Also added is a more prominent and interactive Taskbar, new features in Microsoft Edge, and a better search function in Cortana. Windows 10 Mobile The update brings the already mentioned version 10 of Windows 10 Mobile. We understand that if you are considering buying a new Windows phone, you may need to take a look at this software version first. To give you an idea, we've outlined the major changes offered by the Anniversary Update. First, there are some interesting UI changes. For instance, the "Reach inbox" button has been hidden, since it is now on the lock screen. The new "People and Apps" view is also quite interesting, in particular the idea of managing everything through a single pane. What's more, Microsoft Edge now comes in the browser engine, enabling it to run on low-powered hardware devices. Finally, Cortana is back, with a more user-friendly interface, and the ability to let you control the smart speaker through your phone. Windows 10 Pro We've already covered a lot of the features that come with the Pro version of Windows 10, but in case you need a reminder, here are a few things worth mentioning. First, the Pro version now comes in
