Drag-and-drop a new event Quickly drag and drop a new event from your computer's clipboard. It will automatically be added to your Google Calendar and will be color-coded to match the color of your calendar. Or you can choose a different color for the event. It's up to you.

Color-coding of events This color-coding feature lets you keep your calendar in the same color you use in your everyday life (i.e. red for a meeting, blue for a web conference, green for a lunch appointment, etc.). You can also color-code different meeting types (i.e. conference, book a table, etc.) so you know which event belongs to which color. The choice is yours. Create a new event or link an existing

What's New in the Checker Plus For Google Calendar?

Checker Plus for Google Calendar includes some of the features that Google has recently released. The powerful personal scheduling system is an add-on for the Google Calendar. Google Chrome's filtering system is simply outstanding. Here are a few Chrome extensions that will help you filter the web using autocomplete, tags and more. About the extension The first extension we'll look at is called Autocomplete for Google Chrome. This simple extension was created by Google Inc. and is the perfect way to auto-fill queries in web browsers with keywords. The way it works is pretty simple: 1. Install Autocomplete for Google Chrome. 2. Put a few keywords in the box, and click the "Begin Query" button. 3. In a few seconds, you will see a list of results that should be very similar to the ones that are shown on Google Search (I typed "support", I got some nice ones like "support ticket", "support forums", "support threads" etc.) 4. If you are using a Google search, you can just click the hyperlinked result, and it will take you to the search results. What makes this extension useful? This is, pretty much, a must-have extension for any user of the web. It allows you to type in a search query and it will show you the results related to that. You can also type in the domain name for one of your favorite sites and it will show you the results of this site. There are several other cool things you can do with this extension: In the box, you can choose any category to be searched. For example, if you want to see the content for a specific song, you can type "website of my favorite singer" and it will show you the website of your favorite singer (I typed "Lilly Allen", and I got the website of Lilly Allen). You can also choose to have the results based on: Location (where you are) Time (the time of day) Years (the number of years) Charts (your location, time, years, based on a chart) Tags (what you are searching for) You can also specify the service you are searching for, and it will provide you the results for each service, based on what you have typed. In addition, there are some nice little tricks in the extension: You can drag the results to change their order. If you click on a result, you will have the option to "See more" for the result. You can specify what type of website you want to be filtered. For example, if you have a favorite website for knitting, you can type "website for knitting" and it will show you the results for that particular site. You can add your favorite websites to the extension. For example, I
