Please visit the link below to download xCAT for MSN inviteer How to find the minimal polynomial of  $Sx-1S$  over  $\mathbb{Z}$ ? I need to find the minimal polynomial of  $Sx-1S$  over  $\mathbb{Z}$  and I suppose the standard method is to compute the eigenvalues of the matrix  $SM = \begin{bmatrix} 2 & -1 \\ -1 & 2 \end{bmatrix}$ . But the characteristic polynomial is  $\det(M-\lambda I) = -\lambda^2 + 3\lambda + 2$  and so  $\lambda_1 = -\frac{3}{2}$ . Then, to find the eigenvalues of the matrix I need to solve the linear diophantine equation  $\lambda^2 + \frac{3}{4}\lambda + \frac{1}{4} = 0$ , but how can I achieve this? Is there a simpler method? A: The minimal polynomial is not just the one that you've found but the ONLY polynomial that divides all the other polynomials. This should be clear if you remember the definition of an algebraically closed field. As for the linear diophantine equation. I'm not sure what you mean here. If you're looking for a non-trivial solution  $a, b$  to  $a^2 + b^2 + 4ab = 0$  then your equation is equivalent to  $a^2 + b^2 = -16$ , which has no solution in  $\mathbb{Z}$  as you can see (it has a solution in  $\mathbb{R}$  but not in  $\mathbb{Q}$ ).
